LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF THE WAR

Correspondence of the Associated Press

(By Associated Press.)

ROANNE, Central France, Nov. 16.—"Achtung," was the German command of attention given by a German sergeant-major, in trim German uniform, to 1,500 German soldiers, all in their gray-green uniform with red-edged caps, ranged in long ranks twenty deep along the great courtyard of the barracks of Roanne. The sharp and guttural German command sounded strangely in this French setting, with French officers receiving deferential salutes and giving directions, and French soldiers in their vivid red-blue uniforms standing at shoulderarms at all the exits.

These long lines of German soldiers were typical of the scores of German prison encampments centering at this little town of Roanne, and radiating from here to the Spanish frontier and over to the French colonies in Africa—in all some 200,000 German prisoners gathered up from Champagne and all along the line—maneuvering under German officers in the prison courtyards, working the farms, running the steam thrashing machines, binding hay in bundles for French artillery and cavalry horses, and helping supply France with its sustenance for the army and the people.

ANENT THE SCANDALS REGARDING MUNITIONS

(Communicated)

Editor of the Bonanza, Sir:—With reference to the article appearing in today's "Examiner" with regard to the munition scandals I shall thank you to allow me a little space in your paper to enable me to throw a little light on the subject.

In the first place I would point out that the present threatened exposure is only a latent effort of what was same work they did in the coal mines of Poland, digging the coal from the rich deposits of Central France, offsetting the loss of the French coal fields of Pas-de-Calais in the northeast which have passed into the hands of the invaders.

The Associated Press was given the opportunity to see a large number of these German encampments, and typical scenes of the soldiers doing agricultural and mining work, the party being arranged by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and under the escort of French army officers, Lieut. Brunet and Lieut. Garcia.

In the courtyard of the Roanne barracks the Germans had been drawn up to give the visitors a typical instance of their appearance. They looked rather slouchy until the word of command was given; their uniforms were stained and dirty, showing the results of life in the trenches; they were irregular in height, big bearded Bavarians and short stocky men.

"Bring them to attention, and have them take three steps forward, turn, and three steps backward," said the French commandant.

The direction was interpreted to the German sergeant-major, and then rang out his "Achtung." The effect was electrical on these soiled and slouchy ranks. They sprang into even lines, every head straight and shoulders back, transformed from an rumored a few months back and which has been religiously "sumped" from time to time.

Of course every one will realize that Lord Northcliffe has been fly in the ointment ever since the war began and therefore after his scathing criticism of Lord Hetherington (which undoubtedly was unpopular) will no doubt not carry the weight it would; had it been started by some other public person.

That there is a rotten state of scandalism going on is unfortunately only too true and the ardent effort of every one concerned in the giving and receiving of these contracts is to make an ill wind blow every one irregular mass into perfectly aligned platoons which would have done credit to a parade ground. Then as the command of three steps was given in German, the long lines of heavy wooden sabots came up into the German goose-step, and fairly crashed back and forth over the stone pavement. In an instant the goose-step and the crashing sabots stopped and the lines were rigid. It was little short of sensational, this galvanizing of a whole regiment of mud-stained men into a body fairly vibrating with energy and force, and automatic military precision.

Six hundred of these men had recently been captured in the French advance in Champagne, but they were mingled indiscriminately with the others. One large dormitory, however, was given over chiefly to Champagne prisoners. This, like the rest of the rooms, were scrupulously clean and in good condition, with mattresses and blankets for each man, rooms for shower baths, and the equipment of a well-ordered barracks. The same place had been used before for French soldiers, and the Germans were getting practically the same accommodations. In the dining-hall, besides the regular menu printed in German, was a list of "extras" on the bulletin-board, which could be bought—butter, tea, cheese, soap, cigars, tobacco and other luxuries at the current French prices.

who is lucky enough to get the thin end of the wedge in, a bit of good.

Now I will give one instance where some firm, firms, or individuals are making "pinch money."

On April the 2nd, 1915, a certain firm in Sheffield offered the British government 2,000,000 shells for big guns at the price of $16.25 and the delivery to be made within three months. After some delay the offer was turned down for reasons known to only the powers that be.

The extraordinary fact about the whole thing was, this particular firm who made the offer have been making shells for the British government
